“ Dance Camera West hosts its tenth-annual film festival at several venues around the city, including the Getty, the Hammer Museum, and UCLA. In addition to screening dance films from around the world, the festival features lectures and education on all aspects of dance and film. A DCW membership pass is highly recommended for priority seating, and all events are free, proving that dancing with the devil isn't always a bad thing. ”

Dance Camera West says...

This year's festival and conference will bring together artists, innovators, educators and the entertainment industry to discuss the increasingly active spectrum of dance media on screen. The 10th Anniversary is concentrated in the Westwood area to accommodate the increased number of international guests and invited speakers traveling to Los Angeles for the occasion.
